SIXTEEN BOOKS RETURNED.

Henry Smith, Chief Clerk of the Judiciary, replying to a question asked that Chief Justice Frear had not ordered the sending of Thrum's Annual to the department's exchanges and public libraries, but he had acted himself in pursuance of the former practice. Sixteen were added to the former twenty addresses. Since Judge Humphreys protested, the Chief Justice had advised him to strike off the sixteen new names, as their owners would not be expecting the publication. The twenty original ones would be likely to ask for the Annual if not sent, therefore the work has been mailed to them. Mr. Thrum has had the sixteen other copies returned to him.

THE FIRST WINNERS.

The Honolulu Plantation Co., at the opening of its case, called George J. Wagner, who had drawn the maps in evidence. He stated that the land was worth to the plantation as an integral part of it, $175,000, and that the proposed ditch represented $5000 to the Honolulu Plantation Company. Mr. Wagner testified that water had been carried over this Bishop Estate land from the plantation's water works. He said that there was water on the land the day the jury visited it, which came through this ditch from the plan of the Honolulu Plantation Company. Judge Estee ruled that no evidence could be admitted as to the ditch, it having been constructed after the beginning of the suit.

AN INELIGIBLE PLAYER.

A special meeting of the Hawaiian Association Football League committee was held last night in the hall of the Scottish Thistle Club for the purpose of dealing with the protest lodged by the Honolulu against the ineligible player in the team last Saturday. President Robert Anderson was in the chair. Good feeling prevailed throughout the meeting. After duly considering the matter, the league committee decided that the Malles had not fully complied with the registration rules, and ordered the tie to be replayed March 1. The game of last Saturday is therefore void.

Secretary Cooper has appealed from the Auditor's ruling to the Supreme Court.

SECOND WAR.

On the 4th of March, 1809, James Madison was inaugurated into the Presidency and continued in office eight years. This period was distinguished for the second war with Great Britain. When Mr. Madison entered upon his office the state of the country was in some respects gloomy and critical. From England were at war, and they issued against each other the most violent commercial edicts to the violation of the laws of nations and injurious to those nations who wished to remain neutral. After a series of injurious and insulting acts on the part of Great Britain the Government of the United States declared war against that Power, June 18, 1812, which continued about three years. The seat of war on the land was practically on the frontiers of Canada, of which province it was the object of the Americans to take possession. The Americans, however, were able to effect but little toward accomplishing the designs of their Government. The situation of the contending parties at the close of the war was nearly the same as it was at the commencement. On the ocean, however, it was different. The splendid success of the American Navy in various engagements raised it to a high elevation and gave to her rival a lesson which will not be forgotten.

Little Elsie, aged 3, is ever on the lookout for a chance to add to her vocabulary by listening to the remarks of her elders. Not far from that place in the Catskills where she and her mother had spent the summer months was a point of rocks jutting out from the mountain side, easy enough of access from the rear, but in front a sheer precipice of two or three hundred feet. Elsie had been to the spot several times, and while her protectors looked off in the distance and pointed here and there she had always heard them say something about "the view." When her father came up one of his long Sunday visits, he, of course, had to be taken around to see the various attractions of the locality, and finally came out to the point of rocks. He ventured out pretty close to the edge, when Elsie, a few feet behind him, piped up, in a tone of warning and with a little pride in grasping the opportunity for her new word: "Look out, papa. Don't let too close or you'll fall off into the view."—New York Times.
